I will review the methods for proving the existence of a thermodynamic limit for quantum systems composed of electrons and nuclei, like ordinary matter. I will also present a new approach (joint work with Jan Philip Solovej and Christian Hainzl) which provides a general setting for the study of many different quantum systems.